Forget formal MICE meet and greets It's time to Meet and Eat in Bangkok

When it comes to dining in Bangkok, MICE guests are absolutely spoilt for choice. Of course, the city has always been synonymous with street food, but the culinary scene in modern-day Bangkok now presents more opportunities than ever.

As much as we love dining out in the Thai capital, we know how difficult it can find that perfect balance between food, atmosphere, convenience and price - even more so when you are dealing with large groups of international guests with hungry stomachs to fill.

To make planning your next 'MICE meet and eat' a whole lot easier, we've rounded up 8 of the best dining experiences Bangkok has to offer, with pointers to some recommended restaurants.

STREET FOOD

Bangkok is home to one of the most exciting street food scenes in the world. You'll quickly discover that many Thai dishes are not what you've tasted before. They're even better and more addictive than the ones you've had in restaurants! You won't find another place in the world that can match street food in Bangkok.

Chinatown

Of course Chinatown, or Yaowarat, is a good place to grab some Chinese food, but the sois along the road are teeming with excellent Thai, Thai-Chinese, and Isan (northeastern) country goodies. Given the intense competition here, only the strong and delicious survive.

---

Silom Soi 20

Located in Bangkok's main business district, this place has it all, and the diners are as diverse as the food choices. Thai-Chinese, Indian, Isan, and many excellent vegetarian dishes are on offer. The food is authentic and the prices are competitive, while the atmosphere comes as a bonus.

Ratchawat Market and Sriyan Market

Always near the top of street foodies' lists are the delicious neighborhoods of Ratchawat and Sri Yan. Not far from Victory Monument, this place is somehow more relaxed than similar areas, and offers eager diners everything from the traditional to the modern, all at excellent local prices.

Lumpini Park

Step off the asphalt and into the green lung of Bangkok, Lumpini Park, and take your appetite. You can't miss the line-up of fresh market stalls selling fruit juices, seafood, pad thai, jim joom, deep-fried turnips and vegetable patties. Lumpini is a must-visit food in the heart of the great city.

Chaoroen Krung and Bangrak

Start at the at the foot of Silom Road and head towards the BTS station, where your senses will be assaulted by the most fragrant and aromatic of temptations. The signature northern Thai dish Khao Soi Gai can be found here, as well as roasted duck, steamed noodles, freshly sliced fruit, and the most decadent roti you'll probably ever have the pleasure to savor.

Soi Rambuttri

There is amazing street food all along Soi Rambuttri, Khao San Road's cool, polite little brother. There is a wonderful variety of both places and foods, all in an ambience that foodies will appreciate. A great place to move from pad thai to some amazing boat noodle dishes.

Sam Yan

Centrally located in Bangkok near Chulalongkorn University, Sam Yan market and the whole area is an embarrassment of foodie delights: stir fried dishes, Isan food, sweets and snacks, and much more. Join the students, office workers, and Westerners for some superb street food here.

Banglamphu

Also in the famous Khao San area around the river is Banglamphu, where you will find a scrumptious, totally authentic assortment of the best Thai street foods, including noodle soups, spicy curries, grilled everything, and mouth-watering desserts. Don't miss this spot.
